Afternoon session, after a song the members of the congregation repeated verses of scripture followed by prayer by Mr. T. B. Henderson.

Dr. Geo. A. Joplin explained the "History and Purposes of the Sunday School Standard" and urged that we try to have more of the Breckinridge county schools measure up to this standard.

CAPTAIN'S SON DROWNS IN OHIO RIVER

Little Jack McAdams, Son of Capt. J. P. McAdams, Now in France

Mother Prostrated With Grief.
Body Found.

John Pope McAdams, Jr., the little six year old of Capt. and Mrs. J. P. McAdams, of this city, was drowned in the Ohio river opposite their home Wednesday evening, about 3 p. m. The little fellow in company with a little colored boy left the home of his parents about one p. m. on that day and went up in town where they bought a nickel's worth of candy they then returned in the direction of the McAdams home and a little later the little colored boy returned home and the wet muddy condition of his clothes attracted the attention of a colored woman, who was working at the house, when questioned the little fellow told a conflicting story and appeared to be badly scared.

Mrs. McAdams' attention was called to the absence of the child and she made an effort to get some information from the little negro, but the child seemed so scared that nothing certain could be gleaned from his disconnected story. When questioned concerning the mud on his clothing he admitted that he and Jack (as the little McAdams boy was called) had been wading in the river and that the last that he saw of Jack some bubbling came up. The alarm was given and a number of boys and men hurried to the bank and soon found tracks leading into and out of the water for a distance of 300 yards up the bank. The remains of the sack of candy and later his clothes were found. Many of the boys began a series of diving in the hopes of finding the body, later drags of all kinds were brought into play and an immense seine was used to no avail. Expert divers from Camerton were secured and yet without result. A continual guard was kept on the river both day and night in the hopes of catching the remains, but to no avail until the noon hour Friday, the remains were caught six miles down the river by Frank Hennen, who is living on the Lawson farm. Considerable alarm is felt for the grief stricken mother, whose grief seems too great for any human being to stand. It will be called to mind that Capt. McAdams was at one time engaged in the practice of law in this city, and that he enlisted as a private in the army many years ago and has raised himself step by step from a private to that of Captain and is today serving his country in France—Hancock Clarion.

BRECKINRIDGE COMING TO THE FRONT

In W. S. S. Sales. Quota Not Reached So Far But Will Be Very Soon.

Bankers are Lauded for Work.

Although Breckinridge county has not quite reached its quota of subscribing $427,980.00 to War Savings Stamps, it is not very far from it and from the sales made last week by Geo. E. Bess, Manager of the Trust Department of the Bank of Hardinsburg and Sheriff Jess Carman, which was $2,500, the goal is surely in sight. According to the Kentucky W. S. S. Bulletin this county has subscribed $172,000.00 and the last issue of the Bulletin had the following to say of the campaign in Breckinridge: "The two banks of Hardinsburg are determined that if their own energy can prevent it, none of the Breckinridge County pledges will long remain unfilled. Representatives of the banks each spend two days a week visiting various communities in the county supplied with enough War Savings Stamps to meet the requirements. Their visits are advertised in advance and they take as many stamps as they estimate from the pledge cards will be needed in each district and thus encourage to the fullest extent the fulfillment of pledges."

J. Raleigh Meador, school superintendent, has become War Savings Stamp Chairman for Breckinridge County and has enlisted the co-operation of a hundred teachers and a hundred trustees to increase the county's pledge to its quota.

The eighteen counties in that state which have exceeded their goal so far are: Bourbon, Bracken, Bullitt, Butler, Calloway, Fayette, Fleming, Franklin, Henry, Kenton, Logan, Marion, Mason, McCreary, Mercer, Oldham, Owen and Scott.

C. H. S. OPENS MONDAY SEPT. 2

New Superintendent O. F. Galloway Desires All Pupils To Start in at the School
Opening.

French and Domestic Science to be Stressed.

On Monday morning September 2, at 9 o'clock A. M. the Cloverport Public Schools will open for the 1918-19 session. We are glad to announce that most of last year's teachers will be in the school again this year, which will materially aid in getting things running smoothly without delay. It is earnestly requested that all children who possible can be present at the opening session, so that the classes will not be interrupted by pupils coming in after work has started.

We invite all patrons of the school to attend the opening. Some matters of interest to the community will be discussed among which we may mention the compulsory school law. We shall try to explain this law for the benefit of any who may not fully understand it, so that there may be no misunderstanding later.

The Cloverport High School offers exceptional advantages to pupils of Cloverport and Breckinridge county who wish to secure a first class high school education. We offer a course equal to any school in a town the size of Cloverport, and meet fully the entrance requirements of the best colleges. Besides the usual courses in English, History, Latin, Science and Mathematics, we expect to offer strong courses in French and Domestic Science and if there is a demand for it, Agri culture.

Let us all work together to make this a banner year for the school and make the opening the best in the history of the school.

The superintendent would be glad to hear from anyone who is thinking of entering high school, and show why Cloverport is the best.

O. F. Galloway, Supt.

FARMERS NOT TO BE TOLERATED

Who Refuse to Plant Wheat
Unless They are Promised Higher Prices.

Should be Sent to the Front
Line Trenches.

The Kaiser can have no hope of gaining the mastery of the seas, so that even if his armies over run France and Italy, how does he expect to conquer England and the United States?

This is easily answered. He expects them to quit. As a recent editorial in one of our popular periodicals states, "He hopes there is enough laziness and selfishness and cowardice in the people of these countries to give the game into his hands. He thinks they will get tired of fighting. He thinks they can not stand the gaff."

He banks on the chaps who resent having their profits and pleasures in case they think they have not been interfered with, their diet regulated; on the big capitalist who forestalls as much as the law allows him; on the man who will not buy a Liberty Bond when he can get 8 per cent on a mortgage, and the labor leader and wage earner who will strike even against the Government. To this we may add "He also banks on the farmer who will not plant wheat because some other less essential crop is more profitable." There are undoubtedly a few farmers who, he-treated fairly in the matter of price, have worked themselves up to such a state of pity, and feel themselves so abused that they are ready to quit. The thing to do with such men is to send them to the front in France and let patriotic men run their farms; men who are willing to forego profits for the welfare of their country. We must plant every possible acre of wheat this coming year. Only the German sympathizer or the slacker will stop now to consider the question of profits.

If the price fixed by the Government is not high enough or not a fair one, the thing to do is to make a strenuous fight to secure the price which is fair. In the meantime, the country will not tolerate the man who refuses to plant wheat unless he is promised a high price any more than it will tolerate the profiteer in any other business.

SCHOOL NEWS AND VIEWS.

By Co. Superintendent, J. R. Meador

Those school districts which have not yet reached their quota in the War Savings Campaign should not slacken in their efforts to raise the allotment. Let the teachers co-operate with the trustee in an effort to raise the amount. Pledge cards will be supplied upon request.

During the Institute each teacher was requested to hand in a list of the number and size of desks needed in his school. Many teachers did so and the desks are now here ready for delivery. Where it is possible to do so the teacher or trustee should send a wagon here for the desks. Any interested patron should be willing to come in with his team and haul out these supplies for his school.

S. C. Whoberry Overseas

Following is a letter from Shelby C. Whoberry, who has just arrived over there with the 3th Co., 4th Reg., M. M. S. C., the letter being written just before he sailed. Whoberry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Whoberry, of Glen Dean. His brother, O. B. Whoberry, is also in the service.

My Dear Mother: I will write you a few lines to let you know that I have left Camp Green and I am now in Camp Upton, N. Y., and going over the top. Say Mother, did you get my traveling bag O. K.? I sent it before I left Camp Green. I can't write much today and don't write me until you hear from me.

Hope all are well. This leaves me fine. Well I will close for this time. Good luck to all and good-bye for a long time, maybe until the war is over. Don't worry for I am going over to get acquainted with those Dutchmen. By-by to all.

Your loving son,

S. C. Whoberry,

With Medical Department

Owen Perkins, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Perkins, of near Harned, writes interestingly of his work and surroundings near Camp Hill.

Dear Mother and All: As I have a little time I will write you all a few lines to let you know I am well and getting along fine. I have been busy most of the day although it is Sunday. Not that I am grumbling at that I realize there is lots to be done and I am not asking anyone to do my part.

Since I left home, May 26, I have been in fifteen different camps and now I am at the port of embarkation. My, I haven't much time for the sights as I have been pushed around down this way. Camp Hill is all right. It is on the James river near the old Jamestown settlement. One thing, the sun seems to have a direct ray on this place as the seventh day of this month was the hottest day they have had in this State for 125 years. It cooked tomatoes and other things on the vines and at sun down we had several durn in under the shower bath, had the grines I guess but I am getting along fine but I have been real busy since I got with this Company as they were waiting for a full Company before going across. We have been training in a berry and haven't delayed them long. Glad we have had the pleasure of meeting with this Company. Perhaps Mother, when you get this letter I'll be on my way across the "pond".

I like the Medical Department here it interests you when you realize that you are doing things right and at the right time when if you didn't, many boys would not get to see their mothers and friends again. Some may think that we are no good but when they get all in and can't do, No. 13 will show them stunts that they never dreamed of as I am sure that we will hang together and do our part.

Several boys from Kentucky are with me. Silas Miller and others. Tell all the boys and girls and all old friends that I know. Hello for me. Give them my best regards and also my address. Don't worry about me. Let one letter do for all as I am sure I will be busy over there. I will close with much love to Mother, Dad and Brother.

Your boy,

I had the pleasure of receiving a letter from Charlie Gibson one day last week, he said he would tell me something of his trip. He had no trouble enlisting in Radio in Louisville and was sent to Newport, R. I., was in training there for five weeks. Have been here since and will be ready to graduate about the 5. of September then it will be 'where will we go from here.' I am just glad to be in the service at such a time. I have visited several of the old historical places among some of them was the old North church, the old South church from which the party emerged and marched to the pier and dumped the tea into the Boston Harbor. The house in which the Village Blacksmith lived still stands is said to be more than 200 years old. A great deal more that I have not got time to tell."

MIRACLE OF BATTLEFIELD BURNS ALL SELF-THOUGHT OUT OF YANKS

Hard-Boiled Boys, Dropped Into the Furnace of War, Come Out With the Dross Burned Away, Self-Sacrificing Heroes—Hold Back in Suffering for One in Greater Suffering to Be Cared for First.

By CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND.

They were coming back out of the hot blast of the great battle—those boys of a certain division now famous throughout France and one day to be famous throughout the world. They were not coming back because they wanted to, nor because they had had enough of it; they were being brought on stretchers, wounded, gassed, shell-shocked, to an advanced dressing station. Some of them seemed just boys. One could see them grit their teeth to hold back the moan of pain.

"Hard luck, pal?" said a doctor interrogatively, as the bearers set down a stretcher in the courtyard.

The boy shrugged his shoulders, actually shrugged them as well as he could, bunched up on that stretcher, and grained wanly.

"Comin' fine, if I can get you feller to save that foot. She's smashed plenty. If you can't—all the same." "We'll run you right in."

"Nix, bo, not me. I'm gettin' past all right, nothin' but my foot. You jest lemme be here and git busy with them guys that's hurt. I'm on the waitin' list."

That was one boy. He belonged to an outfit that bears a name far and wide for being boiled hard. Tough birds, you hear them called, rough talking boys with the crust outermost. If you had seen them a month before or two months before when they had not had their purifying in blood and fire, you would not have prophesied that they would hold back in suffering to wait for one in greater suffering to be cared for first. It was an attribute that was not apparent to the casual eye. Hard-boiled, you would have agreed, and you might have felt a trifle sorry for the enemy that had to encounter them. But you would not have stood by with tears in your eyes—not in your eyes, but rolling down your cheeks—and have muttered again and again: "Here are men!"

Dross Burned Away.

But now they have felt the searing breath of war. Suddenly they had been dropped into the furnace and had come out with dross burned away. Something had happened. They were still hard-boiled. Their language was made up of the same words, but the words had taken on a new meaning, their very faces had taken on a new aspect. In spite of blood and grime, and the discoloration and burn of gas, you could see that something was present there which had been absent before—until you could not see at all for the flooding of your eyes.

"I—got mine . . . No use—sport . . . Can't do—nothin' for—me . . . Git—busy with some of them boys—you kin—help."

That was the spirit. That was the thing that had been burned into their souls by the hot breath of war. They had forgotten themselves. Jim was not thinking of Jim but of Mike. Mike was not thinking of Mike, but of Jack. Each passed it on.

The dressing station was small and many must lie outside until the men who were taken in first could be evacuated. You heard groans, but amid the groans you heard cheery, gritty words. "Oow, that d— leg . . . How's Charlie makin' it? Anybody know? I seen him git it . . . Oow . . ."

"They just took Charlie in. He wasn't sayin' much."

"Sny, them stretcher bearers ought to git the Croy de Gorr, them birds ought to. See 'em fetch me back with them shells bustin' like it was rainin'? And would they hurry? Not a d— bit. I hollered to them to git a move on or they'd git busted on the dome, but that little shrimp says for me to mind my own business, he was carryin' that stretcher . . . Afraid if he hustled he'd shake me up and hurt me some. Can you beat that? . . . Oow!"

"Out of Luck Nothing."

"You're next, son," said a lieutenant doctor. "Where'd you get it?"

"Leg and a chunk somewhere in the chest."

"Out of luck."

"Out of luck nothin'. Didn't I bayonet three of them Germans before they got me? Eh? . . . Luck?"

The story goes that this division was called upon to stop the rush of five times its number. The story goes farther, and says they not only stopped the rush but caused a movement in the other direction. It was not an affair of hours but of days, days of constant, bitter, hand-to-hand fighting, with horrors added by the Hun that no American soldier has ever been called upon to face. But they had dammed the flood; had even swept it back for a little, and they were proud.

But their achievement on the field was not the great thing that came into view in those days. It was the spirit that flamed up in their hearts—not merely a spirit of courage, of daring, of heroism against odds, but a spirit of altruism, of love for the other fellow. Somewhere in that holocaust those hard-boiled boys had gotten it, and the manifestations of it that night in the little courtyard before the dressing station made the spot one never to be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

A hurry call was sent to the distant F. M. C. A.

"Can't you do something for these boys who are being brought in here?" the officer in charge demanded.

"What can we do?"

"Something to eat and smoke. Coffee. A bite and a smoke do a wounded man more good than anything else. Do you know, some of those boys have been out there in 'that' for two days with nothing to eat but hardtack?"

So the Y sent its men and its trucks; it made coffee, it brought such fruit as it could; it carried chocolate bars.

"Here you are, sport," said one of them, coming into the courtyard. "Here's a cup of chocolate."

The boy raised himself painfully on his elbow and reached for the cup—then he motioned it away.

"I hain't hurt much—and there's a lot of guys here that's messed bad. You hain't got enough to go around. Git busy."

"I've got smokes and hot chocolate for every man. Go ahead."

"Tonest? I won't be robbin' none of them birds?"

"Tonest."

The boy drank—and was transformed.

"That's livin'," he said softly.

One boy was brought in with a broken leg. It had been an accident and not a wound won in battle. He had got in the way of a motor-truck.

"Jest fix me up out here what you can," he said.

"You go to the hospital, son."

"Nix. Hospital's for those fellows that's hurt. I just got a busted pin. You fix me here and leave me here . . . When you git a chance."

Language Needs New Word.

Somewhere, some time, they had all got this thing. It had come to them out of the flame and crash of battle; it had been carried to them on clouds of searing, noxious gas; it had awakened in them through suffering and through the sight of suffering. They were the same, yet they were not the same. They were not gentle, yet one fancied he could detect a gentleness in their voices. But out of the battle and the suffering, something better than they had ever known came to them. There was utter ignoring of self, and it was a thing wonderful to witness.

"We've got to have a new word in the language," said a captain-surgeon.

"Game won't do. These boys are something more than game. I've never seen anything like it. I don't know what it is." Even he, laureled to suffering and to scenes of bloodshed, wiped his eyes.

"They're—they're—why, damn it all, they're 'something'! Nobody was ever like them!"

One boy lay inside on a mattress on the floor. His chest was rising and falling as he struggled for breath.

"He's on his way," said the doctor to a Y man who was acting as orderly, nurse, assistant, anything.

The Y man went over and touched the boy's forehead.

"How about it, old man?" he said.

"Kind of—lonesome . . . Maybe you . . . could sit . . . here till . . ."

The Y man sat down and a hand struggled toward him. He took it and held it in his own, and he whispered to the boy in a moment. Maybe it was a prayer. Whatever the words, it was a prayer. The wounded man lay still, his hand in the hand of the friend who had come to him in his last dark moment—his last glorious moment.

Another Kind of Courage.

The courage of the battlefield seems to be a common commodity; but the courage to bear pain without flinching; to realize the approach of death without crying out; to reach a moment when you know you must face life maimed, without arm, leg, eye—and not to curse with black rage or cry out with despair—that is another kind of courage. But it was there. Not one man had it, but it seemed as if all those wounded had it—it was the gameness of the bulldog. It was something that had to do with the soul. It was greatness, it was fineness, it was a thing that compelled the watcher to uncover his head and stand bare in its presence.

They were Americans. Perhaps it was their birthright. More likely it was a new thing; newly born of the day and the business of the day. Whatever it was, whenever and wherever it came, it was present. This has been written with repression, with a striving for understatement, with a wish to tell the truth. The thing was there. They brought it back with them.

"How are you making it, sport?"

"Here's a cup of coffee."

"You come around to me after you've given some to the boys over there. They need it."

"Tint is what was there. It has read something new into the meaning of the words American soldier. At the doctor said, some new word must be coined to designate it. It was born of battle and agony."

A mother of a soldier in France writes to one of the metropolitan newspapers offering a wise and timely suggestion in requesting parents of the soldiers overseas to send their sons one letter a week in place of four. She says that it is partly the fault of these four-letters-a-week-writers that their sons do not get their mail. While it is true the soldiers love to get mail, yet when we send so many letters the mails become so congested, we marvel at the accurateness of the overseas mail system. If parents would send one letter and the home paper to their sons every week, they would get enough news from home at that to keep the ties binding and then every fellow would have an equal chance and save Uncle Sam the trouble of putting an embargo on a limited number of letters as he had to put a complete embargo on packages.

A War Correspondent in writing of the conditions in Germany says: "The Socialist Vorwaerts of Berlin calls upon the Government to tell the people the truth about the war. It says that the expectations of those who wish to lead the nation through the war like an ignorant child with the stereotyped assurance that everything was going splendidly are unfulfilled." At any rate the German Government will know after this that you can't fool all the people all the time.

The manufacturing of beer and near-beer is likely to be curtailed on account of the increasing demand for coal to be used in running the munition and war material plants. Not only will the coal be saved but think of the food stuffs saved to help feed men, women and children in place of being ground up into something absolutely non-essential to winning the war.

It has been estimated that Kentucky's corn crop will be 16,076,000 bushels shorter this year than it was last; upon the other hand there isn't room enough in the granaries of the state to store the bumper wheat crop of this spring.

In order to accomplish this, all orders must be in the hands of the stores by 8:30 o'clock, a. m. for delivery same day.

This is necessitated by the whole problem of conservation, by the present scarcity of labor, and by the greater scarcity of labor in the near future, caused by the younger boys entering school, and by the new draft law (18 to 45) which will go into effect soon.

FARM AND STOCK.

Dennie Sheeran, who always carries a smile and a good word for everybody, was enroute Monday to Louisville with a load of cattle and hogs.

The Robertson-Howard Mule Co. report a good business in mules. They have sold recently mules to the following farmers and dealers: Wm. Baskett, 2 pair mules at $422.50 and $365.00. Doc Gray, 3 for $300; Paul Wilson, 1 for $225, 1 for $160 and 4 for $675. They bought 1 from H. LeGrand for $225 and 4 from Indiana parties for $500. They bought 100 tons of straw at $7.50 to $10 per ton for bedding their stock.

C. V. Robertson returned from Tennessee last week with the finest saddle horse he has had in many a day. He goes all the gaits and is as beautiful as a picture.

Mrs. P. Morris Beard was cutting her crop of Burley Monday. It looked mighty fine and we hope she will get $50 round for it. It is the product of her own hands and she deserves a good price and a crown.

Harry Norton shipped, last Saturday, two car loads of cattle. As fine a bunch as ever went out of Breckinridge county. There were 70 head 1,000 pounds average, all of them beauties.

The continued drought is having a depressing effect on the crops in some sections of the county. There have been several fine showers in the county the past week. What is needed is a soaker and we'll get it in good time.

A. N. Skillman & Son, Hardinsburg, bought the Cleveland Tractor and say it is doing fine work.

Worland Carter was in his sweet clover field, Monday, threshing out his seed with his own patent threshing machine. It is certainly a some job and a hot one. It takes hot work and hard work and keeping everlastingly at it to win the war.

C. F. Tinius, Holt, was down last week and renewed his subscription with a smile and a shake. He was feeling good over his crop prospects which are fine.

Lon Dowell, who has charge of the Akers farm, cut 1,500 of his tobacco last week which he says is as fine as silk and it will make some man's mouth water to get it.

E. C. Foote, Irvington, 1, threshed 12,000 bushels of wheat with his machine in the Basin Spring neighborhood. This is more than twice as much as he threshed last year. He was 23 days doing it and his machine and men performed like American boys in the trenches, without a halt or breakdown.

MILITARY POLICE HELP
FLEEING INHABITANTS

Fearing that the German hordes would come within range of their village on the western front the inhabitants gathered what belongings they could and, escorted by British military police, evacuated their homes and were taken to places of safety. The women and the little children were the last ones to leave the village. The picture shows a child wearing the steel helmet of the military policeman who is assisting in their escape.

North of the Roye road the British lunged forward, making another gain, while the French fought their way through the Loges forest south of the city, attaining the eastern border.

Although the perditions of the past twenty-four hours have been on a minor scale the allies are biting huge chunks out of the German front in the Meris-Vieux-Berquin sector of the Flanders front and on the southern end of the Pledry battle zone.

The allies are only about one mile from Roye and are pushing onward despite the desperate resistance of the Germans.

The greatest German efforts to stem the allied advance were centered just west of the Oise river, where the French are pushing up the Compiegne-Noyon railway to get behind the German defense of Lassigny.

British Official Report.

London, Aug. 19.—The text of the war office report follows:

"The pressure of our troops north of the Roye road and north of the Ancre river has continued and progress has been made by us in both sectors.

"In the neighborhood of Vieux Berquin our patrols had sharp fighting and further encounters took place during the night.

"Our troops have made further progress in this sector and in the neighborhood of Meris and have taken a few prisoners.

"The hostile artillery has shown considerable activity about Mont Rouge and the Scherpenberg sector and in the vicinity of Hillboko lake."

French Report Progress.

Paris, Aug. 19.—The French communiqué follows:

"West of Roye there was great artillery activity during the course of the night.

"South of the Ancre the French continued their progress through Loges wood, reaching the eastern edge.

"Between the Mats and Oise rivers we repulsed two strong German attacks in the Monolithe farm-Carney sector, maintaining all our positions.

"Northwest of Reims a raid was attempted by the enemy in the sector of La Louvellette, but was without any result."

Few Wounded Americans Die.

London, Aug. 19.—Eighty-one per cent of the Americans wounded in the fighting in France have returned or will return to the front for service, 14 per cent have been discharged from the army as unfit for further service and only 5 per cent have died. This announcement, showing the excellence of the medical attention received by the American wounded, was made here by the Red Cross.

No Alsace-Lorraine Question.

Paris, August 19.—Reports are in an Alsace-Lorraine question. It is settled. President Wilson is reported to have declared to Theodore Seltzer, according to the Matin. Theodore Seltzer is one of the leaders of the Alsace-Lorraine association. According to the Matin he was received on board the yacht Mayflower on the fourth of July, when the president is said to have made this declaration.

Germans Strafe American Line.

With the American Army on the Vesle front, Aug. 19.—The Germans launched a combined gas, artillery and air bombing attack upon the French and Americans along the Vesle. This was in retaliation for a bombing raid by American aircraft on bridges over the Aisne.

Allies Make New Advance.

London, Aug. 19.—French and Canadian troops have made progress against the Germans over a front of more than three miles, between Goyencourt and Laucourt (Maucourt?), west of Roye, according to the French official communication.

The Bois des Loges, five miles south of Roye, also has been penetrated deeply by the French.

Report From Haig.

The report from General Haig, speaking of the same operation, says the British repulsed a strong German counter-attack at Danery and in co-operation with the French made substantial progress in the direction of Fresnoy-les-Roye and Fransart.

These two places lie north and northwest of Roye, the former about three miles away.

SIX MILLION, GERMAN LOSS

Estimates Made by French Newspapers Give That Figure as the Total Casualties of the Enemy.

Paris, Aug. 19.—The total German losses from the beginning of the war to the end of July, 1918, are understood to be 6,000,000, according to the morning newspapers. The figures include 1,400,000 killed up to the beginning of the German offensive last March. From March 27 to June 17 the Germans are said to have lost 120,000 killed alone.

HUNS TO FACE
BIG YANK ARMY

Total of 1,450,000 Now at the Front or on Way Across the Ocean.

HOSPITAL DEATH RATE LOW

Report of Surgeon General Gorgas is Gratifying—Little Doubt That Program of War Department Will Be Carried Out.

Washington, Aug. 19.—American troops in France and on the way now total 1,450,000, Gen. Peyton C. March, chief of staff, informed members of the senate military affairs committee, increased shipments of troops may be expected, said General March, due to the vastly improved conditions both on this side of the Atlantic and in France.

General March told of the remarkable health conditions obtaining in the overseas forces, referring to the recent report of Surgeon General Gorgas announcing that the hospital death rate was only two for every 1,000 men.

Members of the committee, following the conference with the chief of staff, expressed the conviction that the war department's program for 3,700,000 men in France by June of next year would be realized beyond any question of doubt, and some were of the opinion that it might be exceeded.

General March touched upon the Russian situation, but the information that he gave was given in the strictest confidence and members of the committee refused to reveal it.

Northcliffe Praises America.

London, Aug. 19.—American aid in the war was given high praise by Viscount Northcliffe in welcoming representatives of the overseas press and other distinguished guests to a reception at the Times office.

He told of America's efforts on sea and land, in transport shipbuilding, manufacture of airplanes, food production and other things. He estimated that America would produce 10,000 Liberty motors monthly and that its other war efforts are on a similar large scale.

America is fighting a public war and not a secret war, said Lord Northcliffe in discussing the censorship. He added:

"Their government is frank with them about the war, and I think that has had a deal to do with the acceleration of shipbuilding to an extent I had believed almost impossible."

Lord Northcliffe complimented that the British censorship had kept hidden the best efforts of the British nation and its allies. He contrasted British and American methods with regard to casualties, adding that British casualties last year in killed, wounded and missing were 800,000.

After denouncing the pacifists, Lord Northcliffe concluded:

"The right place to make peace and where I believe peace will be made is in Berlin or Potsdam."

MINERS WILL ASK INCREASE

Substantial Advance, It Is Said, to Be Discussed at the Coming Conference at Washington.

Indianapolis, Aug. 19.—Labor conditions in the coal mining industry, for which "the only logical solution is a substantial flat wage increase to be applied in all classifications of mine labor," will be discussed at a conference of district presidents of the United Mine Workers to be held in Washington August 22, according to an announcement made here by Frank J. Hayes, president of the United Mine Workers of America. In announcing the conference Hayes said it had been called "to avert, if possible, a rapidly developing labor conflict within the coal industry which, if permitted to go unchecked, would undermine coal production plans."

BEEF PRICES FINALLY FIXED

Agreement Between the Packers and the Food Administration Reached After Two Days' Conference.

Washington, Aug. 19.—Maximum prices for beef purchased for the army, navy and allies during September were fixed, after a two-day conference between packers and the food administration. The base prices per 100 pounds for steers of quality and grade satisfactory to the inspectors were fixed as follows:

Four hundred and seventy-five to 575 pounds, $21.00; 575 to 700 pounds, $22.05; 700 to 850 pounds, $23.55.

Relief measures were suggested by the food administration to take care of beef coming into the market as a result of drought in southern and southwestern states.

The conclave closed a great hand on the veteran's shoulder. "Who but the crown prince himself!" he said.

"But I thought—how can he be here?"

"Here is he, in our very hands. It is no time to ask questions."

"If he is here—"

"He is with the Americans," hissed the conclave, the veins on his forehead swollen with excitement. "Now, go, and quickly. I shall watch. Say that when I have secured the lad, I shall take him there. Let all be ready. An hour ago," he said, raising his great fists on high, "and everything lost. Now—hurry, old wooden leg. It is a great night."

"But—I cannot. Already I have done too much. I am damned. I have lost my soul. I who am soon to die—"

"You will go."

And, at last, he went, hobbling down the staircase recklessly, because the looming figure at the stairhead was listening. He reached the street. There, only a block away, was the soldier's shop, lighted, but with the dirty curtains drawn across the window.

Old Adelbert gazed at it. Then he commanded his soul to God, and turned toward the palace. Before it were packed dense throngs of silent people.

Now and then a man put down a box, and rising on it, addressed the crowd, attempting to rouse them. Each time angry hands pulled him down, and hisses greeted him as he slunk away.

Had old Adelbert been alive to anything but his mission, he would have seen that this was no mob of revolutionists, but a throng of grieving people, awaiting the great bell of St. Stefan's with its dire news.

Then, above their heads, it rang out, slow, ominous, terrible. A sob ran through the crowd. In groups, and at last as a whole, the throng knelt. Men uncovered and women wept.

The bell rang on. At its first notes old Adelbert stopped, staggered, almost fell. Then he uncovered his head.

"Come!" he said. "The old king! My old king!"

His face twitched. But the horror behind him drove him on through the kneeling crowd. Where it refused to yield, he drove the iron point of his wooden leg into yielding flesh, and so made his way. Some one raised a cry and others took it up.

"The king!" they cried. "Show us the little king!"

But the balcony outside the dead king's apartments remained empty. The curtains at the long windows were drawn, save at one, opened for air. The breeze shook its curtains to and fro, but no small, childish figure emerged. The cries kept up, but there was a snarl in the note now.

"The king! Long live the king! Where is he?"

A man in a red costume, near old Adelbert, leaped on a box and lighted a flaming torch. "Aye!" he yelled, "call for the little king. Where is he? What have they done with him?"

Old Adelbert pushed on. The voice of the revolutionist died behind him, in a chorus of fury. From nowhere, apparently, came lighted box banners proclaiming the chancellor's treason, and demanding a republic. Some of them instructed the people to gather around the parliament where, it was stated, leading citizens were already forming a republic. Some, more violent, suggested an advance on the palace.

The crowd at first ignored them, but as time went on, it grew ugly. By all precedent, the new king should be now before them. What, then, if this rumor was true? Where was the little king? Revolution, now, in the making. A flame ready to blaze. Hastily, on the outskirts of the throng, a delegation formed to visit the palace, and learn the truth.

Drums were now beating steadily, filling the air with their throbbing, almost drowning out the solemn tolling of the bell. Around them were rallying angry groups. As the groups grew large, each drum led its followers toward the government house, where, on the steps, the revolutionary party harangued the crowd. Bonfires sprang up, built of no one knew what, in the public squares. Red fire burned. The drums throbbed.

The city had not yet risen. It was large and slow to move. Slow, too, to believe in treason, or that it had no king. But it was a matter of moments now, not of hours.

The noise penetrated into the very wards of the hospital. Red fires bathed pale faces on their pillows in a feverish glow. Nurses gathered at the windows, their uniforms and faces alike scarlet in the glare, and whispered together.

One such group gathered near the bedside of the student Haeckel, still in his lethargy. His body had gained strength, so that he was clothed at times, to wander aimlessly about the ward. But he had remained dazed. Now and then the curtain of the past lifted, but for a moment only. He had forgotten his name. He spent long hours struggling to pierce the mist.

But mostly he lay, or sat, as now, beside his bed, a bandage still on his head, clad in shirt and trousers, bare feet thrust into worn hospital slippers. The red glare had not roused him, nor yet the heat of the drums. But a word or two that one of the nurses spoke caught his ear and held him. He looked up, and slowly rose to his feet. Unthinkingly he made his way to a window, holding to the sill to steady himself.

Old Adelbert had been working his way impatiently. The temper of the mob was growing ugly. It was suspicious, frightened, potentially dangerous. The cry of "To the palace!" greeted his ears as he finally emerged breathless from the throng.

He stepped boldly to the old stone archway, and faced a line of soldiers there. "I would see the chancellor!" he gasped, and saluted.

The captain of the guard stepped out. "What is it you want?" he demanded.

"The chancellor," he lowered his voice. "I have news of the crown prince."

Magical words, indeed. Doors opened swiftly before him. But time was flying, too. In his confusion the old man had only one thought, to reach the chancellor. It would have been better to have told his news at once. The clanking of stairs takes time when one is old and fatigued, and has but one leg.

However, at last it was done, and old Adelbert stamped to the door of the room where the council sat debating and the chancellor paced the floor.

Small ceremony now. Led by soldiers, who retired and left him to enter alone, old Adelbert stumbled into the room. He was out of breath and dizzy; his heart beat to suffocation. There was not air enough in all the world to breathe. He clutched at the velvet hangings of the door, and swayed, but he saw the chancellor.

"The crown prince," he said thickly. "Is at the home of the Americans." He stared about him. Strange that the room should suddenly be filled with a mist. "But there he those—who wait—there—to capture him."

"Make—Haste," He Said, and Slid Stiffly to the Ground.

He caught desperately at the curtains, with their royal arms embroidered in blue and gold. Shameful, in such company, to stagger so!

"Make—haste," he said, and slid stiffly to the ground. He lay without moving.

The council roused then. Mettlich was the first to get to him. But it was too late.

Old Adelbert had followed the mist to the gates it concealed. More than that, sham traitor that he was, he had followed his king.

AMERICANS ASKED TO LIMIT USE OF SUGAR

Must Use No More Than Two Pounds Per Person a Month if the Present Meagre Allied Sugar Ration Is Maintained.

Stocks Will Be Short Until Beginning of New Year—Ration May Be Enlarged Then.

Two pounds of sugar a month—that is the sugar ration the U. S. Food Administration has asked every American to observe until January 1, 1919, in order to make sure there shall be enough for our Army and Navy, for the Allied armies and for the civilians of those nations.

By New Year's the world sugar situation will be relieved somewhat by the new crop. Cuban sugar of this year's crop will be arriving in this country.

Every available sugar source will be drawn on by the Food Administration during the next winter months to maintain sufficient stocks here to keep up our national sugar supply. During October the first American beet sugar will arrive in the markets. By the middle of November some of our Louisiana cane crop will be available. All of this sugar and more may be needed to keep this nation supplied on a reduced ration and to safeguard the Allied sugar ration from still further reduction. In Europe the present ration is already reduced to a minimum.

Our Situation. The situation which the United States faces in its efforts to maintain a fair distribution of sugar to the Allied world is as follows:

Sugar supplies throughout the country, in homes, stores, factories and bakeries are at a low ebb. We must make increased sugar shipments to the Allies.

Production of American beet and Louisiana cane crops have been disappointing.

Porto Rico crops have been curtailed.

Immense sugar stocks in Java cannot be reached on account of the shipping shortage; ships are needed for troop movements and munitions.

Army and Navy sugar requirements have increased as well as those from the Allies.

Most industries using sugar have had their allotment reduced by one-half; some will receive no sugar.

Households should make every effort to preserve the fruit crop without sugar, or with small amounts of sugar. Later, when the sugar supply is larger, the canned fruit may be sweetened as it is used.

COMMANDS AMERICAN FORCES IN ITALY

Maj. Gen. C. G. Trent, commander of the American army in Italy, whose readiness to go into action on the Italian front has been announced by General March, chief of staff. The troops received a great ovation when they paraded through the streets of Turin and Milan, according to an official dispatch from Rome. American soldiers have already distinguished themselves in Italy, our flyers having done great work in the memorable battle of the Piave, when the Austrian army was routed.

HOW TO TELL A GENTLEMAN

If He Has Tassels on His Umbrella He Isn't, Says Butler.

At one of the new British ministries in London there is an attendant who has been a butler in Grosvenor Square and prides himself upon a certain instinct for distinguishing blue blood from the other varieties. Some ladies of the department were drawing him on the subject.

"Now, there's Mr. Jones," said one. "Surely Mr. Jones is a gentleman."

The ex-butler looked supremely scornful.

"All very well on the surface, miss," he admitted. "But he actually walked in the other day with tassels on his umbrella."

French Tailors as Hosts.

Master Tailors' association of Paris has passed a resolution asking its members to open their homes to American officers and soldiers of New York whose families belong to the profession.

Cat on City Pay Roll.

Tim, authorized municipal cat on the pay roll of the city of Newton, Mass., probably is the only cat in the country with such a distinction. His salary is $20.20 a year, and no public official ever fulfills his office duties more efficiently. His title on the books is "official rat and mouse catcher." A special appropriation of eight cents a day is made for his services.

CHANGES OPINION OF MARINE AS FIGHTER

Captured German Officer's Diary Reveals Sudden Amendment in Valuation.

Secretary Daniels authorizes the following:

How the contemptuous opinion of the Germans for the fighting ability of American troops may be changed literally overnight is shown in an extract from the diary of a German officer who was captured and taken into the American lines by the marines. A translation of the diary has just been received at marine corps headquarters.

Reserve Lieutenant Tillmanns, the writer of the diary, belonged to the Second battalion of the Fortieth regiment (Baden Guards). Twenty-eighth division. This was the fourth division which the marines had against them in the fighting around Chateau-Thierry. The other three were so badly cut up that they could not carry out their orders to attack.

The extract from Lieutenant Tillmanns' diary follows:

"June 6th: Departure from Rocourt 3 p. m. to Briques further back Colney. We had to move out of Rocourt because it did not belong to our sector. Rear is crammed full of troops. Billets, therefore, very scarce.

June 7th: At the front. American troops have made counter-attacks. We have to move to the front again. Route of march over Rocourt Epoux. We are lying in the woods to the right of Etrepilly for the present. In position. In the night of 8th and 9th we will relieve the front line. It must be a sad outfit which allows itself to be thrown out by the Americans.

"June 8th and 9th: Moved forward at night and relieved the Four Hundred and Sixty-first regiment at four in the morning in the Bois de Belleau. Incomprehensibly wide sector. Where there were three companies, we have only one.

"June 9th and 10th: The worst night of my life. I am lying in the thick woods on an open height in little holes behind rocks, for this is heavy artillery fire, until six o'clock in the morning. It is a wonder that the fellows were all at their posts when the Americans attacked. The attack, thank God, was repulsed. God has again mercifully preserved me."

The diary ends abruptly, as the next day the writer was a prisoner in the hands of the Americans.

The great $10,000 five gaited saddle horse stake which was introduced at the Kentucky State Fair last year and will be a feature of the sixteenth annual Kentucky State Fair this year, focuses the attention of the horse-world on the state. The event consists of a sensational struggle for championship honors among the stallions on Monday night, the mares on Tuesday night and the geldings on Wednesday night, while the grand championship of the world is fought out between mares, stallions and geldings on Saturday night of Fair week.

"CARRIES ON" AT 74 YEARS

Woman Born in Germany Works in Fields to Beat Kaiser.

Mrs. Elizabeth Battelger of Warwick county, Indiana, is seventy-four years old, but she is helping the United States in war by toiling in the hot sun in wheat fields.

Her plan is simple. She is saving the grain that in ordinary years is permitted to stand in the field—the wheat a binder does not get. Thus far Mrs. Battelger has cut 105 bushels, resulting in the saving of four bushels of wheat.

The aged woman was born and reared in Germany and cannot speak English as well as her mother tongue, but she says if she could give the Kaiser and his Potsdam gang a solar plexus blow it would be a knockout. Two of her sons and one grandson are in military service for America.

CONTROL OF AIR IS WITH ALLIES

Reconstruction in England Factor in Supremacy.

HUNS LOSE MANY MACHINES

Building Better and Faster Machines Than the Enemy—Rhine Cities in Terror of Bombing Planes—British Also Show Superiority in Aerial Defenses—America Now Playing Part in Air Offensive.

From London to Jericho the allies have obtained decided superiority over the enemy in the air. Since the war started Germany has trailed France and England in aerial warfare, Zeppelins excepted. France and England didn't waste their time with Zeppelins, which have been a dismal failure when compared with bombing machines such as the allies build and manipulate, much to the terror of the Rhine towns.

Besides forcing down and destroying three German airplanes to one lost by the allies, England, France and now America are building better machines, faster machines and machines which will carry more tons of bombs each than the German.

Germany has lost not less than 5,000 machines and aviators in the past twelve months.

This figure, 5,000, represents Germany's losses in all theaters of war to allied planes. While the exact official number of German planes destroyed, together with the allied losses, may not be disclosed, it may be stated that this unofficial summary is very conservative.

Radical Reconstruction.

At the outbreak of the war Great Britain had eighty aircraft. Every few days Great Britain is producing more airplanes and other material for the air force than she possessed altogether at one stage of the war. The strength of the Royal Air Force has been multiplied at least 200 times in personnel as compared to the personnel at one stage of the war. Great Britain also has furnished a considerable number of airplanes for her allies.

England's air force has undergone radical reconstruction and its tactics have been changed, much to the discomfort of Germany. Briefly, these changes are: Consolidation of the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service into one organization, known as the Royal Air Force; establishment of an air ministry, creation of the independent air force, and use of "cavalry" aviators—airmen who have charged advancing Germans, bombed and machine-gunned them from a height of a hundred feet.

The independent air force, which is said to have only one authority higher than its own commander, this being the war cabinet, has been busy bombing German cities since its creation three months ago. Four-fifths of the German munition works are in the Rhine valley, and all of them within striking distance of these independent air force bombers. Their plan is to keep a number of Rhine towns in a constant state of terror by bombing works of military importance in those communities. One town may be raided at night after night for a week or more, or it may be visited day and night, or twice daily, whichever plan seems to cause the most consternation and demolition. In addition, railway junctions, ammunition dumps and barracks are bombed by this organization of flyers, which works separately and distinctly from aviators attached to certain army corps who also may be dispatched to do similar bombing.

Attack Advancing Columns.

The great advantage of aviators for bombing and machine-gunning advancing columns was shown in the March and succeeding offensives, when time and again scores of aviators concentrated upon a certain point disorganized a German advance, or held a portion of the line that had given way until re-enforcements could be rushed up by the Franco-British. On one day these aviators fired more than 200,000 rounds into German columns. More than 120 tons of bombs have been dropped in one day.

America is playing a part in the air offensive. Every new contingent of American aviators which reaches France or England helps out in the general scheme of things which keeps the allies masters of the air.

The British also have shown they are superior to Germany in aerial defenses. There have been twenty-one raids on London in the past year, three of these by Zeppelins. But since the visit of eleven Zeppelins October last, when five of them were brought down, four in France and one in the Mediterranean, they have not attempted to visit London, where the air defenses are such that the Zeppelins do not dare to come lower than 20,000 feet, which is too high for them to bomb effectively.

Gotha raids also are becoming quite expensive for Germany, the last raid, May 20, resulting in seven machines being destroyed. Twenty-five aviators trained for night flying are far more valuable to Germany than two score of civilians killed in London. The city's defensive barrage and protecting airplanes are too much for the invaders.

The sixteenth annual Kentucky State Fair to be held in Louisville the week of September 9-14, will boast in Thaviu's Band of forty musicians one of the greatest musical organizations ever appearing at a State Fair. The Thaviu organization is made up of forty splendidly trained musicians who are arrayed in military regalia and accompanying it is a coterie of solo artists of international repute, together with a galaxy of ballet dancers who are said to be terpsichorean wonders and fully up to the coryphée support of Pavlova, Genée or Ruth St. Denis.
